About the Group

The CLG is made up of assistant attorneys general, paralegals, and support staff with extensive experience in construction matters, mediation, and litigation. The staff — based in the Ohio Attorney General's Court of Claims Defense Section — has worked extensively on behalf of plaintiffs and defendants in the private and public sectors. The group's expertise in representing state agencies and institutions is unparalleled in Ohio. Collectively, its members have more than 150 years of litigation experience.

Additional Resources

Experienced attorneys and staff in related sections of the Ohio Attorney General's Office — including Business Counsel, Labor Relations, Executive Agencies, and Legislative Affairs — ensure the office is able to provide the full range of client services. These staff members offer additional expertise in construction issues and contract matters. Learn more about these sections on the Ohio Attorney General's website at www.OhioAttorneyGeneral.gov.

Commitment to Clients

CLG members are committed to:

- Providing the highest quality legal representation
- Understanding the client's problems
- Being part of the state owner's team
- Being accessible

Scope of Services

The Attorney General's CLG provides counsel from a project's inception to final construction and, if necessary, into the courtroom. Services for state owners include:

- Ensuring the selection of architects, engineers, contractors, and others involved in the project meets legal requirements
- Defending against disappointed bidders
- Providing counsel on contract issues, bid disputes, claims management, insurance, warranty recovery, and other matters
- Recovering for defective design and construction
- Defending against contractor and subcontractor claims and liens
- Informing state owners about construction issues of common interest
