The camera angle was obstructed throughout the videos due to various factors including, but not limited to, vehicles, law enforcement personnel, and firearms utilized by officers. Percussive sounds could be heard throughout the entirety of the video. The most noteworthy percussive sounds as determined by this author will be indicated. Additionally, various communication and tactical strategies could be heard throughout the video from various law enforcement personnel on scene. Again, the most notable statements as deemed by this author will be annotated below. Both firearms and less-lethal devices were utilized throughout this incident. Where possible, the type of firearm utilized will be noted. This information was verified throughout the investigative process, interviews with officers, and statements captured in the bodycam footage. The video should be reviewed in its entirety for additional information.

Sergeant Eric Lee previously stated during his interview that he only deployed less-lethal devices and ammunition during the incident. It appeared Sergeant Lee utilized four different devices throughout the incident and fired approximately 83 rounds of less-lethal ammunition. His BWC did not visually capture the actions of Vanest leading up to or during the time Sergeant Lee deployed the less-lethal devices, however, based on statements and the general context at the times he fired, it appeared he was not directly engaging with Vanest.

Sergeant Lee returned to the armored vehicle and selected another less lethal device. He then moved his position and was now behind a black SUV. Someone could be heard saying “I’m ready for some glass breakers when you guys are.”. At 11:00 Sergeant Lee and another officer moved closer to Room #220 and stood next to a gray truck. Sergeant Lee then fired his less-lethal device 17 times towards the window of Room #220. Defects in the glass window of Room #220 could be observed after the numerous percussive sounds (CPD – Lee BWC 3). At 14:56 Sergeant Lee could be observed loading another less-lethal firearm with ammunition (CPD – Lee BWC 4). Sergeant Lee appeared to take a position near the front of the armored SWAT vehicle. At 15:10 a percussive sound could be heard, and the recoil of Sergeant Lee’s less lethal device could be observed. Sergeant Lee then loaded a second less-lethal round into the device and moved to the rear of the armored vehicle. At 15:36 a faint percussive sound could be heard and Sergeant Lee’s camera angle shifted slightly likely due to recoil from his less lethal device. Sergeant Lee then discarded a cartridge casing, loaded a new round of ammunition and fired one more round of less-lethal ammunition. At 20:44 Sergeant Lee appeared to utilize a different less lethal device and fired approximately 40 rounds. At 23:45 Sergeant Lee fired approximately 13 more rounds from his position next to the black SUV. At 25:36 a loud percussive sound could be heard and then someone began yelling. This appeared to be the moment [REDACTED] was shot. The camera angle at the time of the percussive sound was pointed toward the ground. Numerous percussive sounds could be heard after this; however, the camera angle was obstructed and did not visually capture anyone who had fired. At 54:02 the camera angle captured an unknown officer discharging their firearm an unknown number of times (CPD - Lee BWC 6).
