██████████ had his BWC activated throughout the duration of the incident. However, the video did not visually capture any portion of the shooting incident. Additionally, the camera angle for ██████████ BWC became obstructed during the recording and nothing could be visually observed after 51:22. Due to this, his BWC did not visually capture the actions of Vanest leading up to or during the time ██████████ fired. Percussive sounds could be heard throughout the duration of the video and no determination based upon the BWC video could be made as to which percussive sounds were the result of ██████████ firing.

The most noteworthy percussive sounds as determined by this author will be indicated in the summary below. Various communication and tactical strategies could be heard throughout the video from various law enforcement personnel on scene. Again, the most notable statements as deemed by this author will be annotated below. The video should be reviewed in its entirety for additional information.

None of the remaining videos captured footage of the actual shooting incident. Some of the videos audibly captured the sound of gunfire in the background. However, they did not visually capture shots being fired. Details associated with each video were documented in the following table:

			a light gray cloud could be observed on the roof of Room #220 (SCSO - [REDACTED] BWC 2). At 16:41 a percussive sound could be heard, and a light gray could be observed on the outside wall of Room #220 (SCSO - [REDACTED] BWC 3). At 26:20 someone could be heard stating, "he, he's in their coughing, I can hear him." Someone could also be heard coughing in the background. This occurred after numerous percussive sounds that were likely the result of chemical munitions being deployed into Room #220 (based on statements made from officers on scene that were audibly captured on camera). At 28:00 there was a percussive sound followed by someone yelling. This was likely the moment [REDACTED] was shot in the arm. At 28:41 [REDACTED] appeared to be holding a less-lethal device and fired approximately 45 rounds of less-lethal ammunition. At 29:30 the rifle originally utilized by [REDACTED] was visible in the camera angle. At 51:22 the camera angle began to shift. It appeared that [REDACTED] had moved the BWC from its former location and the view became obstructed. At 53:32 someone could be heard stating "he's reloading, he's reloading." The statement was followed by multiple percussive sounds and someone yelling "shots fired." The camera angle remained obstructed for the remainder of the video. Percussive sounds could be heard throughout the duration of the recording.
